We all like to have friends. Friends are fun to be around.

Friends talk to each other.
They also listen to each other.
A friend is someone who cares
if you are sad or happy.

Friends are happy for you when good things happen to you.

They are sad for you when bad things happen to you.

Friends take turns playing games that the other person likes (not just playing the game they want to play all the time).

They also share things.

Friends listen to each other instead of talking all of the time and never listening. They also are interested in the other person and will ask them questions.

Friends make you feel important. You make your friends feel important too.

Making each person feel good about themselves is a great thing.
